

Be so much more...

Sunday, 06 July 2008

Tonight I was watching my all time favorite TV show again... "So you think you can Dance". Being a dancer myself I really have so much respect for the talent on that show... dancers and choreographers alike.

Tonight there were quite a few exceptional performances and some very profound comments. If you watched the show you will know what I mean... and you will probably hear me talk more about that in the near future because to me dance is such a great metaphor for life... and most certainly have a lot of similarities to your Pizzazz...

This had me thinking about the Pizzazz Factor. Those dancers on that stage are being asked to do so much more than dancing. They need to be great technicians of course, but above and beyond that they need to tell a story, convey a message and do it with conviction and passion. They have to do it with strength and trust... Even when they are out of their element - dancing a style that they are not familiar with, they have to do it with ease and make it look like they are completely comfortable in that "role".

This is expected from each and every performer on that stage. They need to so eloquently express themselves with their bodies through movement... without saying a word.

Your Pizzazz Factor is exactly like that. You need to know basics, just like a dancer needs to know how to turn and leap and point their toes, but your Pizzazz Factor is so much more than that.

Knowing how to walk, stand, sit, talk and use your body language is not what is going to give you that magnetic presence and unmistakable radiance... it is so much more than that. You need to convey your own story and do it with passion. You need to believe in yourself... even when you are out of your element and you feel nervous or insecure, that is when your Pizzazz Factor pulls you through.

Once you have gone through my course... once you have practiced all the Pizzazz Factor principals the way I lay them out for you in the three DVD's and the workbook... that is when you will also have that "extra special something" that will make you feel on top of the world.

Your new found confident self-image will radiate out to the world and you will also be a top performer. Whether it is in your role as a dynamic business owner, or as a teacher, a public speaker, a CEO or a wife and mother... or a performer, or even on a first date...

Whatever the situation and wherever you are; armed with your Pizzazz Factor you know you will always make a stunning first impression and they will still remember you long after you left the room!

Kind regards

Vanessa Bader

P.S. So be more than just a technician and embrace your Magnetic Presence with passion, poise and conviction!
